Reduce Your Exposure to Hormone Disruptors that Magnify Estrogen Dominance
(and Contribute to Breast Cancer Risk!)

Xenoestrogens (chemical contaminants in our environment that mimic estrogen) are in many everyday products. Being aware of what you consume and avoiding unnecessary exposure may help reduce your risk of developing estrogen dominance.

Here are some helpful tips:

- Avoid pesticides, herbicides, and fungicides.
- Buy hormone-free meats and dairy products to avoid hormones and pesticides.
- Do not microwave food in plastic containers, using glass containers is a healthier alternative.
- Avoid the use of plastic wrap to cover food for storing or microwaving.
- Avoid freezing water in plastic bottles to drink later, try stainless steel water bottles instead.
- Use chemical free, biodegradable laundry and household cleaning products.
- Choose chlorine-free products and unbleached paper products (i.e. tampons, menstrual pads, toilet paper, paper towel, coffee filters).
- Minimize your exposure to nail polish and nail polish removers. "7 Free" or "5 Free" brands offer a much healthier alternative by removing the most harmful chemicals.
- Use naturally based fragrances, such as essential oils.
- Use chemical free soaps and toothpastes.
